Humans' teeth are covered all over in a hard substance called enamel (the hardest substance in the body) which resists wear.

This translated into a TB prevalence of 1435 patients per 100,000, which is more than tenfold that of the national prevalence estimate of Ukraine.